The mayor made the council aware of receipt of a request for water storage initiative. Suggestion was submitted to contact the League of MN Cities with the request.

An additional request presented from a school district teacher was briefly discussed. The Chaska Middle School West Social Studies teacher was interested in a council member speaking for Local Government Day in class.

Franchise Fees and Street Maintenance

The city manager recapped previous discussions relating to the Franchise Fees and Street Maintenance topic discussed by the council. The council had adopted a work plan to study and pursue resident engagement on funding future street maintenance. Included in that pursuit was identifying whether or not to review the use of franchise fees as a potential funding tool. Then the council held a meeting involving the use of those fees. Then a technical explanation was presented to the council regarding franchise ordinance and fee processes from the city attorney. The council held the option of consideration. Additionally, residents would be given the opportunity to submit input. Decision was reached that moving forward the council would implement a franchise ordinance involving cable television services as required by statute.

Fast forwarding; according to several postings involving the City of Carver and the issue related to the Franchise Fees reports have stated that the city council said 'no' to the franchise fees. The discussion had been held for approximately two months, along with resident inputs. The city council rejected unanimously to rule out a funding source from franchise fees for future street maintenance. The related fees were a means of collecting funds from utility companies utilizing rights-of-way. Reviewing project scheduling, future state aid, budget management, taxes and other alternatives will be pursued to successfully complete future street maintenance projects within the city. It was also reported by other sources that the city will be moving forward with franchise agreements without any fees with cable providers. Comcast and Jaguar Communications require agreements, without any fees included in order to fulfill a telecommunications requirement with the State of Minnesota.

The city reviewed the topic of scheduling a public hearing for the franchise agreement for cable television providers. Council consensus was also that it would be more prudent to fund future street maintenance by the use of property taxes. Motion was made and carried with all ayes to schedule the Public Hearing, publish the notice involving the franchises for cable for April 6th.

Community Survey

The city manager drafted a 2020 Community Survey for the council to submit further feedback and direction on the number and type of questions sought, along with a project budget. The survey corresponded with the council's identifications of an initiative within the current Strategic Plan. The council had received previously a templated proposal from the Morris Leatherman Company. The financial impact was discussed by the council to conduct the survey. Those costs were discussed.

NEW MUSICAL ASKS WHICH WOULD YOU CHOOSE: LIFE, DEATH, OR IMMORTALITY?

Chaska Valley Family Theatre presents sweet and touching

"Tuck Everlasting"— Mar. 13-22

What... if you could live forever?

Chaska Valley Family Theatre presents Tuck Everlasting, the Broadway musical that explores what it means to choose an immortal life over a meaningful one. Based on the classic YA novel by award-winning author Natalie Babbitt, Tuck Everlasting is set at the turn of the 20th century and features gorgeous and fun Americana-inspired music, costumes and dance in a sweet — and literally timeless — story for the whole family, that The New York Times called "a warm-spirited and piercingly touching musical."

When young Winnie Foster runs away from her quiet, protected life, she meets the mysterious Tuck family living in the woods behind her home, and discovers they have a secret — the secret to eternal life. Why: This Broadway musical revisits the beloved story of the irrepressible Winnie Foster, the immortal Tucks, the dangerous Man in the Yellow Suit and two small-town sleuths hot on everyone's tail — with the addition of fantastic songs and beautiful choreography. This enchanting, funny and moving story connects with audiences of all ages. (And adults should not forget their tissues.)

Who: Chaska Valley Family Theatre has provided opportunities for families to experience theater together — both on and off the stage — for 24 years. Director and choreographer Hannah Weinberg-Goerger has assembled a cast of local professional actors including Zachary Hedner, Mabel Weismann, Cody Olson and Derrick Taylor-White as well as a live orchestra.

When and Where: Chaska Community Center (1661 Park Ridge Drive, Chaska MN 55318). March 13-22, 2020. The show runs weekend matinees at 2:00 pm on Saturdays and Sundays, and 7:00 pm evening shows on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Adult tickets are $20.00 and Student/Senior tickets are $15.00. Wednesday, March 18th features special Forever Young pricing, where all tickets are available at the student price. Night Marauders - Red Bench Bakery - Pursuits Continued

Much to the marauders surprise when they arrived at the Red Bench Bakery in the early hours before dawn that their intruding presence would be interrupted by the chef himself opening to begin his daily routine. Territory had seriously miscalculated their timing on this outing.

Territory, Raschevious, Rascal and Bandeet under the cover of the darkness had made their way east of Carver through the trail system over to Chaska. Carefully they meandered their way from the levee at the athletic field through yards, across streets, dodging moving vehicles skillfully until they reached their destination in the northern part of downtown on Chestnut Street. They stopped for a drink and a short rest at the city hall fountain kiddy corner from their final destination.

They quickly and quietly slipped inside the Red Bench Bakery. It took a few moments for their eyes to adjust to the darkness within. The seating area was to their left as they'd entered through the door from Fifth Street. Almost directly in front of them was a cozy fireplace. To their right was more seating along the wall and the display counter with all of the delicacies, menu, bread etc being offered.

"Sure, is inviting eh?" Raschevious commented feeling right at home.

"Smells yummy too." Rascal took a deep breath to caressing the scents as they entered his nose.

Bandeet pointed her nose upwards to smell deeply too.

Territory was uneasy for some unknown reason, his sixth sense warning his subconscious.

Just as the quartet began to canvas the kitchen baking area, Territory heard a click of a lock being unlocked. They all scattered quickly hiding under cover as the chef entered, relocking the door behind him. None of them made a sound, barely even breathing as they heard light switches clicking and the lights began to brighten the darkness that would inevitably disclose their presence. Each slipped unnoticed back into the dining area carefully. They could hear the clanging of bowls, as the baker prepared to create his majestic delicacies.

"Can you smell that?" Rascal whispered.

The other three nodded.

"Makes me hungry." Raschevious stated rubbing his stomach as it began to rumble.

"We better go." Territory announced.

Rascal grabbed a cookie off the counter as they slipped out the east door quietly.

Territory caught a side glance of the cookie sticking out of Rascal's mouth, furiously he hissed, "You know better!"

"No one will miss one cookie." Rascal defended himself weakly.

"We touch NOTHING!" Territory shouted louder than he intended absolutely beside himself.

Their skirmish was so loud outside that the chef came to see what all the fuss and racket outside was about. Spotting the four raccoons outside his door was most unexpected, grabbing a broom and began swatting at the quartet hollering as he swatted, deliberately missing actual contact of them, "Get out of here you varmints!"

The four scattered in different directions swiftly out of reach and out of sight.

With the unexpected appearance of the human the whole stealing of the cookie was ended and lost in the whole process of escaping. However, Territory was still so angry with Rascal that it had been four days and he still was not speaking to the scoundrel. No one dared defend the culprit either. Rascal had broken the number one rule. Never, ever take anything or make any kind of mess. They all knew he would be banned from future venues for quite some time. Even Rascal knew and stayed out of sight of everyone feeling very ashamed for giving into his weakness. He didn't have the heart to face Territory. The whole episode was also interfering with Territory's ability to complete his review, as well. When he finally made his decision to ban Rascal from future trips, was he able to finally concentrate.

Territory retreated to his favorite hideout and began to script his thoughts,

"The Red Bench Bakery is a family owned café specializing in 'classic American and French pastries, breads and other sweet treats'. Also offering artisanal sandwiches. Andy, Kjirsten and Andrew spend much of their time at the historical building that housed the bakery industry from 1884 to 2009 in Chaska at 500 North Chestnut Street. Andy has over twenty years' experience at managing kitchens and bakeries for various types of businesses. Meanwhile the whole time constantly dreaming of his own bakery. That dream became a reality on December 26th, 2017 after a lot of planning, work, renovating, preparing and then the opening of the Red Bench Bakery. Andy has a passion for baking. "if you can succeed in Chaska, you can succeed anywhere," Andy told someone. To Andy it's that love and passion that his philosophy is breaking bread with his customers. His baking abilities are as passionate as his philosophy. He believes not only in the physical action but also the sharing of the nourishment of baking and living coinciding. Andy also believes that bakery items are not bad for you, it's like everything else in life, moderation is the key. Baked goods are good for you, just not in excess. Andy's ultimate goals are several, success to share and care for not only the people he shares his passion with but also for his created products, well aware that his staff is the backbone to all of their successes never to underestimate their importance. Lesson learned young to treat others well, do what is right and good things will come around full circle. His lifetime goals are the success of his stores in the future. Andy has unlimited energy delivering his creations to others throughout the metro. Keeping busy is not only important but productive, he says. You will find varying flavors cookies, croissants, scones, muffins, Danish and cinnamon rolls to please your pallets. There are various lunch sandwiches to curb your hunger. Andy also bakes delicious breads including rye sourdough, olive bread, baguette, Red Bench Levain on Tuesdays and Wednesdays. On Thursdays and Fridays Autumn Rye is available, Garlic Asiago offered Thursdays through Saturdays and if you prefer Country Wheat, be sure to stop in on Saturdays and Sundays. He also serves various beverages. A definite stop one should not overlook. Making life even more interesting for the trio, there will be a Red Bench Bakery opening soon in Excelsior at 284 Water Street. What makes this establishment special is Andy says, "not out to make millions of dollars but do what I care about and take care of my employees and my family comfortably." Could that be the key to his success?"
